A Directory of Canadian Ethnocultural and Bilateral Business Organizations

The Canadian government's policy on multiculturalism is unique in the world. Canada explicitly recognizes its diversity as a source of dynamism and strength.

Increasingly, Canadians are coming to understand that multiculturalism goes far beyond the issues of language, heritage, and culture. It extends into the way people earn a living, and reaches into the world of business.

Canadians increasingly recognize the economic contribution made by our ethnocultural groups and the tremendous additional reserve of business skill and energy that exists within this element of the business community.

How to tap that reserve has become the focus of much recent discussion. One place to start is to become familiar with Canada's ethnocultural business resources. This directory is designed to contribute to that end.

How to Use This Directory

It is arranged in three sections. The first lists ethnocultural business associations, arranged from west to east by province, then alphabetically by city and name of organization. Each of these associations is generally composed of business and professional people from within one ethnocultural group.

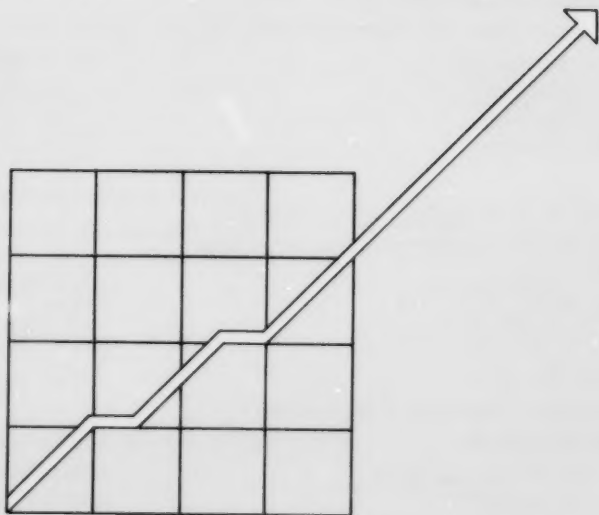

The second section contains a list of the members of ethnocultural business advisory committees associated with the Federal Business Development Bank in five Canadian cities. It is arranged from west to east by city, and then alphabetically by the name of the committee member, followed by the organization represented. Membership on the committees is not exclusively restricted to the representatives of ethnocultural business associations.

Finally, the third section contains the names of bilateral business organizations specializing in trade between Canada and another country or region of the world. The section is set up from west to east by province, then alphabetically by city and name of organization. Membership in these organizations is not associated with any one ethnocultural community.

It is hoped that this directory will prove a valuable resource for all of Canada's business people. Above all, it should highlight another source of economic dynamism and promote the "networking" that is the foundation of commerce today.

ETHNOCULTURAL BUSINESS ASSOCIATIONS

This section contains the names of Canadian ethnocultural organizations specifically oriented toward business. The entries are arranged by province from west to east, and then in alphabetical order by name of city and name of organization.
